Library Discovery: Week 7

Getting Started
What is a topic or area you have expertise in? How did you develop that expertise?

Tips and Tricks
- Use Primo (the default search on the library homepage) to search for what books are available in CSU Libraries. Note that we have both paper and e-books.
- Paper books can be located by their call number (the number on the spine). Note that the system we use is different from some other libraries you may have been to, like public libraries, so it will be unfamiliar to most students. Our system is alphabetic (i.e. find the right section starting with the letters) and then numeric (after you find the letter section, look for the whole number that follows the letters).
- The call number locations in Morgan library are as follows (note the special categories like government documents):
  - Basement – P-Z, government documents, bound journals
  - First floor – current awareness, reference, curriculum
  - Second floor – H-N
  - Third floor – A-G
- If you have trouble finding a book, ask at the Help Desk—they get questions about finding books all the time! You can also request a book be put on hold for you, and then pick it up from the Loan & Reserve Desk.
Reflection
Since this is the last official class in this part of the program, your reflection will be a few questions regarding what you learned and how you can apply it. Please fill in the questions online, so the librarians can get your feedback. The link is on the program website: https://libguides.colostate.edu/bridge

Questions:

I learned something new that would help me succeed in my classes (agree/disagree).
I am more aware of the library’s resources and services (agree/disagree).
I feel comfortable contacting librarians for help with my research (agree/disagree).
What was one thing that you learned that you felt was most valuable about the Library Discovery classes?
What else could the library do to help you succeed in your college classes?
